Most of Options On Park Are Secured

County Donates Site At Old Court House To Uncle Sam

MOST OF OPTIONS SECURED

Prospects for early completion of the land transfer upon which the creation of a great national park at Appomattox's Surrender Grounds is dependent, brightened somewhat this week, after being jockeyed back and forth across the hairline often separates success and failure.

Options on the bulk of the needed 900 acres of land have been taken by the Resettlement Administration, it is understood this morning. There are some 26 options needed in the entire project, and it is understood that some 18 of these have been secured and the others are nearing the final stages of negotiation. The acreage optioned already is over 75 per cent.

A deadline of June 20 has been set up for all the options to be in the Raleigh office of the Resettlement Administration. If the prices and terms are approved there, they will be rushed to Washington for acceptance. If accepted and the land is bought, it will be turned over to the National Park Service.

$100,000 is waiting in Washington and is ready to be spent here as soon as the land transfer is made.

Local citizens have rallied to the project this week and a splendid spirit and cooperation and interest has prevailed.

Yesterday the county board of supervisors authorized the chairman and clerk to over the county's acre of land to the government. This includes site of the old court house and old jail. It won't cost Uncle Sam anything for this important property.

In granting the options the land owners are exhibiting a commendable spirit and are contributing materially to the immediate realization of a dream of adequate memorialization for which efforts have been made almost since the last shots of the War Between the States rolled up the James and were stilled here at Appomattox April 9, 1865.

The Resettlement Administration has been very liberal in the prices named in the options. A limited amount was available and it had to be stretched out to go as far as possible. However, if the present negotiations fatted, the project may be doomed to many more long years waiting. As matters stand today, everything seems to hinge upon the remaining few options, and getting the ones obtained accepted.

Hall Announces Program For Dedication

(Special to Times Virginian)

Richmond, June 10. The program for the exercises incident to the dedication of the beautiful Shenandoah National Park at Big Meadows, Va., on July 3 at which President Roosevelt will deliver the principal address, was announced here today by Wilbur C. Hall, the chairman of the state commission on conservation and development.

Demand for Horses Is on Increase in Canada

Ottawa, Ont.—The horse is staging a comeback in Canada.

The Canadian department of agriculture reports that demands for horses from United States brewers and for the use on farms in western Canada has increased the value of the heavy type of horses by 20 per cent in the last two years, giving a great impetus to horse breeding.

In 1931, when the end of prohibition was in sight, exports of horses from Canada to the United States leaped from 672 in 1930 to 6,069, and in 1932 to 6,733.

The trade dropped in 1933 and 1934, but is again being revived by demands for Canadian draft horses from United States brewers. A recent shipment from Lambton county in Ontario brought a price of $230 per head in the United States.

The principal demand, however, is a domestic one. In 1921 there were 3,000,000 horses on Canadian farms. Last year there were only 2,262,000. The drop is explained by the fact that with the advent of tractors and other automotive machinery farmers abandoned horse-breeding.

Now, with farm prices low, farmers are abandoning tractors and again turning to horses. They find it more economical to feed oats to horses than to sell the oats to buy gasoline.

Football Star Becomes Mighty Alaskan Hunter

San Francisco, Calif.—Herbert Feldscher, who used to be a football player at Stanford university, was telling stories to his friends of his thrilling adventures in Alaska, from where he has just returned.

The stories were almost unbelievable, but Herbert's friends believed them because he showed them some pictures.

With James Flood and Hugh McKenzie, Herbert spent a month hunting in the Alaskan wilds. They had many narrow escapes, he said, from injury or death at the claws of big grizzly bears.

Feldschaker had one encounter with a grizzly that might have been tragic but for the marksmanship of his guide, Jack Lean, a famous sourdough. The bear charged and the sourdough slew it when it was only 20 feet away.

Man-Eating Orchids

Seattle.—"Carnivorous orchids," M. W. Dye calls a breed of plants he found 6,000 feet above sea level on the west slope of Mount Rainier. The species of plant are most exiting.

Miss Ruth Jobe is spending some time at Hilton Village.
